IMMIGRATION OF LAST YEAR.—Our Commissioners of Emigration have just issued their annual report for 1862. The figures would seem to show that the laboring classes of Europe entertain no very great fears that this country is going rapidly to the dogs. The whole number of alien passengers who arrived at this port from foreign countries in 1862 was about 76,000, against 64,000 in the previous year. Of these, upwards of 42,000 were from Great Britain, and 28,000 from Germany. The entire emigration from Great Britain and Ireland during the last 15 years amounts to 2,586,000, of which 1,164,000 was from Ireland. From Germany, during the same period, the emigration amounted to 1,034,454. It has been generally supposed that of the emigration from Victoria's dominions by far the larger half came from Ireland, but the figures tell a different story, the difference against that country being nearly 300,000.

MONDAY MORNING, FEB. 23, 1863

Removal of the Superintendent's Office

The following is a copy of the petition addressed to Mr. Huntington, Superintendent of Indian Affairs for Oregon, asking the removal of his office from Salem to this city The petition has been signed by all of the principal business firms in the city, and many gentlemen of influence and respectability, and the reasons assigned for the removal are clear and forcible all of which must command the attention of the Superintendent We deem it unnecessary, at this time to enlarge upon the petitioners, as there is but little doubt that the Superintendent will comply with their request

The undersigned citizens of Portland would respectfully submit the following as reasons why your office should be established at this point, viz:

1. As about two thirds of the Indians of your Superintendency are located east of the Cascade Mountains, quicker and more certain communication between them and your office can be had from this point than from Salem
2. More important interests are involved in connection with the Indian service east of the mountains than on the west, hence your office should be located [other things being equal], at the most convenient point of communication
3. Portland is the cheapest, best, and most convenient point for the purchase and shipment of supplies for the Indian service
4. Exchange can be more readily effected, and large Government drafts can be more readily converted into available means here than at any other point in the State.
5. As Portland is a more central point of communication with the several Agencies, than Salem, your traveling expenses in visiting the several reservations, as well as the traveling expenses of the Agents, in visiting your office, will be annually much less if your office is located here than if at Salem

For the above reasons, knowing that your determination in this matter will be governed purely by your desire to promote the interests of the public service, and believing that the foregoing considerations will be deemed satisfactory and sufficient, by the Department at Washington, the undersigned would respectfully urge upon you the propriety of establishing the office of Superintendent of Indian Affairs at Portland.

FOR BOISE RIVER.—We saw and conversed yesterday, with Mr. W. Pratt, of Pratt & Carr's pack train, east of the mountains, who informs us that he starts to-day from camp recently made, about 3½ miles east of this place, for Boise River. He has at his camp a few animals which were brought down for special use, which he takes with him up to Dalles, at which place himself and partner intend purchasing a cargo for the mines, packing about ninety mules. Mr. Pratt says that the main part of his train wintered on the Umatilla, without difficulty or distress The snow in that region has nearly all disappeared. But little difficulty is apprehended in reaching Boise by the 10th or 15th of April. We also hear of other parties who start for the new Eldorado from this city in a few days, among whom are several well known citizens of Portland, whose judgment and experience warrants the belief that no obstacle of serious importance will be met, after this time, on the route. The first intimations of the anticipated grand rush to the auriferous fields on our eastern border are now perceptibly visible, and trade begins to look up for the rich harvest in store for the thousands who may venture into its turbulent currents.

BITTER ROOT.—We were shown yesterday, by Mr L. A. Brooks, a small quantity of the root known as bitter root, which gives name to the mountains and valleys east of the Blue Range. This vegetable radical has somewhat the appearance of Sarsapharilla, except in color, which is white, it is slightly bitter to the taste, though not nauseating It is dug by the Indians, generally in the fall season, dried and afterwards ground or pounded into a kind of dough, which is baked and eaten as bread It possesses a large proportion of esculent and probably a fair share of medicinal properties, it is therefore not entitled to the epithet of the "root of bitterness"

A HOLBROOK

Particulars of the Capture of Arkansas Post

A dispatch to the Missouri Democrat of January the 17th gives the particulars of Gen McClernand's great victory at Arkansas Post, which we copy

On Saturday the main portion of the army with three iron clad gunboats—the Louisville Cincinnati and Mound City—and three light draught boats, having entered Arkansas river from a branch of White river approached the fort sixty miles above the mouth of the Arkansas known as Arkansas Post placed at a favorable location for defense on a bend of the river, of irregular, horse shoe shape It has for some months been much boasted of by the Confederates as a spot so fortified as to be extremely formidable At a point a mile below the fort where persons in the fort were unable to see what was done, the troops were disembarked The gunboats proceeded up the river taking position above the fort as well as below, so as to be able to rake it with their heavy pieces The land forces in the meantime, under Sherman found that back some distance a bayou hindered progress, in the way they desired to advance, and he returned and chose a route more favorable for intended operations

Another division meantime took up its march somewhat nearer the locality of the fort, and avoided the obstruction of the bayou Other obstructions existed, however in the shape of rifle pits, which it became necessary to flank by advancing to the furthest extremity from the river This was not done without considerable skirmishing, which consumed the remainder of Saturday There was some loss in these proceedings, and about sixty of the enemy, most of whom wandered into the Federal lines by mistake, were taken prisoners

It was nearly dark before the Federal forces had so far advanced as to have the fort in full view, and ready for storming the next morning

While their operations were proceeding on land, the gunboats had taken positions, and a little before dark a smart artillery fight took place, which the early closing in of darkness cut short The first shell fired by the enemy struck Lieut Hamberd, of the Thirteenth Illinois, and shattered his leg

The next morning—Sunday—the land force found that the enemy having lost their rifle-pits, had thrown up new intrenchments — These they proceeded to attack, and also to secure a position above the fort as well as below The ground in the rear of the fort was found, as we advanced, to be divested of timber, except in a particular part where it was useful for cover and prostrate trees and brush were so disposed as to present the greatest possible amount of obstruction As the two sections of McClernand's land forces advanced over the main distance between the river and the more approachable positions surrounding the fort, a reinforcement of two thousand men arrived for the rebels from St Charles on White river, twenty-five miles distant by land, and was with difficulty prevented from forming a junction with the attacked body They succeeded, however, by taking advantage of a shelter afforded by a ravine

In the meantime casual firing of artillery from the gunboats, which had been partially suspended by the necessity of supporting the land operations, now grew more vigorous, and at one o'clock heavy firing commenced between the forts and the gunboats, which continued for three and-a half hours so briskly that there were only occasional and minute intervals at which the strained ear seemed unrelieved from the thundering roar, which told that blood was then coursing impetuously in maddened veins, and that every man was determined to seize upon victory The casemating of the fort presented a formidable appearance, which seemed to have justified the boasting that had been made of its impregnability A thickness of three feet of solid timber, covered with railroad iron, made the whole look as if it could resist the utmost force of cannon ball To the deep dismay of the defenders of the Post of Arkansas, the iron hail from our monster guns shattered their most formidable defenses, penetrated and demolished the stronghold they had reared with so much skill The battered rails of iron came in contact with the strong timbers, and the concussion caused the splinters to fly with fatal effect among their ranks, and caused the dismounted guns to fall into the common ruin, proving the dreadful power of our gunboats and their mighty armaments when managed by stout hearts and used with stern determination The hot fire by the Federals at the commencement of this fearful contest penetrated one of the casemates of the fort, and killed seven men relied upon for its defense. By another shot one of the enemy's caissons exploded, causing the death of six men and nine horses

With their casemates demolished, their defenses weakened by the destructive fire; their reinforcements taken, and a storming party closing in upon their rear, but one course was left open to the defenders of the Post of Arkansas. They had fought bravely, but their enemy was unconquerable, even by their strongest resources, and was necessarily yielded to as victor After a loss of about two hundred men in killed, wounded and missing, and a somewhat heavier loss on the part of the attacking party, the commander of the post, Gen Churchill, surrendered at half past four o'clock in the afternoon Gen McClernand took the whole rebel command, about 4,800 prisoners, twelve or fourteen hundred of whom were on the sick list The gunboats, which had inflicted so much damage themselves, escaped without serious injury

The prisoners taken declared that if our arrival had been postponed till a day later they would have given us a much stiffer fight, as large reinforcements would have joined them

In reply to a question as to the number of men and the state of the fortifications at Pine Bluff, Little Rock and points on White River, they advised the interrogators to go count and learn for themselves, as their own statements might be doubted They were sent up the river, starting on Monday, and will probably be here from Memphis to-day It is thought probable that St Charles on White river, will be next reduced, then Pine Bluff, and finally Little Rock

In addition to the above we have seen a slip from the Memphis Enquirer, which says that two regiments of rebels arrived at the fort on the morning after the surrender and entered with flags flying and drums beating supposing it still held by the rebels They were captured of course swelling the list of prisoners to something over 5,000

LAND SLIDE—The Argus states that a land slide occurred on the river bank between Oregon City and Canemah, on the 10th inst, depositing a large body of earth and blocking up the railroad so as to prevent the passage of trains for a few hours, until it was removed

ODD FELLOW'S HALL—The Odd Fellows of Oregon City are fitting up a spacious Hall for the use of the Order, and it is said will be a credit to the fraternity of that place

LATER FROM THE EAST.

NEW YORK, Feb 20 —The New Orleans letter of the [illegible] inst, to the World, says our Consul at Monterey writes as follows Wagon trains for the Confederate army have been bought at Monterey and down the country as far as San Luis Potosi Goods for the interior are sent across the Rio Grande at Fort Duncan Our agents purchased in Europe three vessel loads of arms and the arrival is daily expected at Matamoras A cargo of medicine was also purchased in Europe and is known to be [illegible] that port

The Houston (Texas) Telegraph of the 5th states that the guns of the gunboat Westfield which was blown up in Galveston Bay, have been fished up

The Times New Orleans letter says there is a rumor afloat respecting a disorderly spirit having manifested itself among our troops at Ship Island, owing to the arrival there of a colored regiment Reports go so far as to state that several officers have been arrested for mutinous conduct

A Port Royal correspondent says that the attack by the Montauk and the gunboats Seneca Wassahickon and Dawn assisted by the mortar steamer C H Williams upon Fort McAllister, Ogeechee river, Georgia, was resumed on Sunday morning, but we have not been able to ascertain that much progress was made in reducing that fortification

Under the guidance of a negro pilot the Montauk was taken early in the morning to within 600 yards of the battery and commenced work at once continuing until 12 o'clock, m, when the ebb tide compelled her to retire She was unable to break the walls in consequence of the immense thickness of the embankment—nearly 30 feet The Montauk was struck 46 times, but received no other damage than the starting of bolts in the pilot house and shattering her smoke stack The other vessels took a position at long range and kept up a steady fire until signalled to leave The Seneca and mortar steamer each received one shot, but neither vessel was injured In view of more important service requiring the Montauk the attack on this fort, for the present, will probably be relinquished

Another Port Royal letter of prior date to the above, says the Montauk had been engaged for several days attacking an iron clad battery on the Ogeechee river The rebels have more superior guns than were ever used before They also use steel pointed shot, but although the turret was struck 16 times the shot all glanced off

ST LOUIS, Feb 10 —A dispatch from West Plains, of the 7th, says that Col Warren's cavalry drove Marmaduke's forces out of Batesville on the night of the 4th, killing and wounding many and capturing some prisoners, among the latter was Col Adams

John Conness was elected U S Senator from California, on the 10th in joint convention of the Legislature Benj Shurtleff was his opponent Conness received 98 votes and Shurtleff 15. The latter was voted for by Union Democrats and Secessionists, who nominated him at a reconstruction love feast It is believed that the election of Conness will greatly strengthen the Union party

Letter from Auburn.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT]

AUBURN, FEB 9 1863

Winter hangs on tenaciously and while we read of rain at Dalles and melting snows beyond the mountains we have no indication of the kind around us, and at the present moment the snow is falling about as fast as is convenient in any latitude or altitude, and the weather is colder than it has been before since November, for November was our coldest month. Emigrants from the States this fall say they never saw such beautiful winter weather in their lives, and except that there has been during the last two months an almost daily accession to the snow on the mountains about us, we had a pleasant time all around.

Every one is now looking up in anticipation of spring, and the coming of water in abundance and gold in still greater abundance, and a few weeks more will bring it to us.

There is nothing new. Every day people are leaving for Boise, almost daring Heaven in the attempt, but, then, they go, and so far as we hear go safely, and continually come back freighted with tales that would have done credit to Munchausen. There was a man frozen here or near here on Burnt River, a few days since, he was out hunting became overdone and was found dead and frozen. I know of no other death from freezing in this whole section. I am unable to give the name of this person, though the circumstance appears to be well authenticated. Auburn will be blessed with numerous saw mills in the spring, and lumber can be procured for forty dollars per thousand feet, which will tend very much to add to the facilities for improvements, and assist the growth of the place.

The Board of County Commissioners have lately met and laid out county roads on the most necessary routes of travel, licensed quite a number of bridges and ferries on the most important streams. Snake River will have some half a dozen ferries on it, and the rates of toll will be fair and reasonable. A man, 25 cents; loose animals, 25 cents, wagons and one ton of freight and one pair of animals, $2; and so on to correspond, which will guarantee the traveler from imposition in the limits of Baker County. Even at these rates these ferrymen who have good locations will make fortunes the next season.

Wells, Fargo & Co have an office here—opened the last week. Ned Tracy himself is here, as are also Loyd Brook and R R Thompson, Esq, probably to take a good look into the Ditch Company's affairs, which are progressing very well, and tending to completion. These gentlemen seem to like the journey from Walla Walla here, and consider the road over the mountains through the snow, only a pleasure trip. Should the present snow-fall continue they would have a chance to judge of mountain travel in the winter, with snow drifts to break through and new trails to make.

Civilization is fast making inroads upon the Blue Mountains, and when a Stage route is established from the Columbia river here, we will begin to feel "at home" even in this region of wilderness.

The news from Boise is that mining has dried up, that the Indians have become troublesome in stealing horses, and are delighted to have the American horses to steal. A whole pack train was lately missing and never found.

Two old mountaineers, named Mountain Jack and Jim Greenwood, met two Indians—I tell the tale as 'twas told to me—and conversed with them in a general way. The savages declared that the horses were taken by Indians, and no white men were engaged in the business, they were very much pleased at the success they had achieved and that very night undertook to take into their possession the two horses Mountain Jack and Greenwood were riding, but those redoubtable mountaineers, were on the watch, and Messrs Indians were shot, and killed dead in the attempt. The two men crossed the river and secured the horses the Indians had ridden, and found one of them to be the bell mare of the missing pack train.

Tom Byrnes or Barns, a notable rough was lately killed at Boise while engaged in the pleasant occupation of shooting at the bystanders.

The Snakes will no doubt be very troublesome the coming season, and travelers cannot be too much on their guard when on the road through this country.

We have two bowling alleys added to the improvements of the place, and a traveler landed at midnight near here on some mountain ridge, would be apt to deem himself, a la Rip Van Winkle, among the enchanted Catskills, listening to the rolling balls and falling pins of the eternal bowling ground of the good old Sir Hendrick Hudson and his ghostly crew, for the falling pins are heard all night, as well as day. There is really no news to tell of greater importance than I have told, or else I would endeavor to place it upon record.

The Eye and Ear Diseases.

It must not be forgotten by the eye and ear sufferers that Dr Van Zandt has made these afflictions an especial study and that he is the only Surgeon in our State who has diplomas for that branch of practice. Very many of the eye and ear troubles are purely deranged nervous action and are cured by his new regalvanic battery—as amaurosis, squinting, cataract, floating specks before the vision, twitching of the eyelids, nervous deafness, roaring and buzzing noises in the ears, giddiness etc. All operations successfully done on those delicate organs of sense.

An Exchange of Prisoners

"Every young man ought to enlist—every one!"

Letty Dallas flashed the blue light of her eyes, half smiling half scornful upon Mr St Mayne as she spoke A straight little maiden with black ripples of shining hair and blue eyes full of shadow like late blossomed violets, it was not in the nature of any male individual to endure her sprightly badinage unmoved Yet Marcy St Mayne only smiled as he stood quietly watching her

"Are you so very anxious to secure volunteers, Miss Letty?"

"Anxious? of course I am! Come Mr St Mayne follow your brother's example, and turn soldier!"

St Mayne smiled with provoking coolness

"Oh, if I could only inspire you with a spark of my enthusiasm" said Letty, with glowing cheeks and flashing eyes "What sacrifice wouldn't I make for the Banner of Stars!"

"Would you really sacrifice much?"

"Any thing—every thing!"

St Mayne lifted his long dark lashes and looked her full in the face with an expression she could hardly comprehend!

"Am I beginning to make some impression on that icicle nature of yours?" she laughed "What bounty shall I offer? A ribbon? a smile? or a bouquet?"

"Letty!" said St Mayne calmly and deliberately, "I do require bounty—a bounty beyond money and beyond price!"

"What a solemn preface!" said Letty, lightly "Well?"

"I will be your soldier Letty and fight as man never fought before, until your own lips bid me lay down the sword if you will reward me, some day, with your own sweet self That is the bounty I require!"

The deep crimson which had dyed her face turned suddenly to ashy whiteness—she leaned against the carved marble cupids of the mantle, that he might not see how she trembled

"No, no! I cannot! I cannot! Anything but that!" broke from her quivering lips

"Pardon me!" said St Mayne, "I see I have over-estimated the amount of the sacrifice you are prepared to make for your country. You are willing that we men should baptize with our blood the steps to Freedom's altar, yet you cannot give up one idle dream, one girlish fancy, in its behalf Do I seem harsh?" he added, as her eyes were raised appealingly to his face "Nay I did not mean it. There, Miss Letty, our negotiations shall be forgotten!"

"Stop, Mr. St. Mayne!" she said, folding her little hands so tightly together that the pink tipped nails turned to rose leaves "You are right in speaking bitterly of idle fancies I accept your proposition—go, as my representative, on to the battle field!"

His face lighted up with sudden brilliance

"And then?"

"And then—you devoirs shall not be unrewarded."

He took the cold hand tenderly in his

"I will lay down my life, if need be, in token of my thanks," he said

Over—it was all over! She had given up all that a woman holds dearest for her country's sake, yet she hushed the sobs that struggled up from her breaking heart and tried to think she had done right. And then she took a tiny-folded paper from her bosom—only a playful note about some japonicas that Walter St. Mayne had once written her, and burned it, without daring to read its contents over

"I cannot lay down my life for the good cause," she moaned, "but I can yield up my life's happiness When a soldier falls, shot through the heart, the pain is over, but oh! mine will ache on forever Yet I should not repine—it is for my country"

White and silent, she sat there, while the sunset flamed through the silken purple folds of the curtains, and touched the dark old paintings with gold Sweet, faint odors rose from the marble vases of heliotrope and roses in the bay window—to Letty they seemed like the scent of those pale flowers that grow in cemetery shadows And the gray, gray twilight came at last.

The night before the battle? St Mayne never forgot the starry silence of the heavens without—the peculiar aromatic odor of the pine cones crackling on the stone hearth of the rude Virginia cabin—not even the ragged crevices in the log wall. He remembered them all as long as memory and life endured

There was a light, elastic step on the threshold, a clink of spurs against the floor, and a tall, brown-faced officer stood beside him, laying a careless hand on St Mayne's shoulder.

"Writing letters Marcy? Don't lay them aside—there are no secrets between brothers"

"You are right," said St Mayne, "there should be none. I am writing to my engaged wife"

Walter St Mayne held out his hand in smiling congratulation.

"Engaged, old fellow! And never told me? But who is the lady?"

"Miss Dallas—our lovely little Letty"

"Dallas! Letty Dallas!"

Walter St. Mayne's head fell on his folded arms, both resting on the rude camp-table, and a low groan broke from his lips.

"Walter, are you ill?"

"No, not ill," stammered the young man, in a stifled voice "Only I am tired and these pine-cone fires have such a suffocating smell Don't be uneasy I shall be better soon. Go on writing to—to Letty Dallas"

St Mayne looked at his brother's drooping head with a keen, agonized gaze. He asked no questions, but quietly folded away his papers, and sat regarding the fire until Walter St Mayne looked up again

"We are to fight to morrow they tell me, Walter," he said "Well, I'm glad of it But, Walter, if—" He paused a moment, then resumed, "if I fall, you will not forget the brother who loved you far better than his own life Promise me that!"

And Walter promised, with his forehead resting on Marcy's shoulder, where it had often, often lain when they were both boys

But Marcy St Mayne did not fall By his side, through all the din and tumult of battle, walked his unseen guardian angel, and when he bore his young brother from the red field, a sabre wound across his brow, the shout of "Victory!" sounded like a pæan in his ears

The purple curtains were drawn to shut out the storm and darkness—the gilded clock ticked softly on the mantle of the room where Letty Dallas sat all alone her dimpled cheek resting on her hand while the unshed tears sparkled on her lashes brighter than any diamonds

Suddenly the door was opened and a servant announced "Lieutenant St Mayne

She started up, pale and trembling, then he was come at last to claim her troth

How changed he was as he stood before her—how the calm, steadfast brightness of his eyes perplexed her!

"Letty," he said, "by all the rules of love and war I am your captive

She stood spell bound in the magnetic light of his glance "But," he added, "I wish to effect a change of prisoners"

"A change of prisoners?"

"Even so, dearest, and here is your other captive!" He stepped back, and Letty's wondering eyes fell on a tall young soldier who had lingered in the shadow of the door way—a handsome fellow, whose brown curls hid the fresh scar on his brow—her lover who had never dared to tell his love Ah he had grown braver now

Well, true love is not exactly selfish but self absorbed and it was not until Walter rose to take leave at the close of that twilight that they remembered that Marcy had slipped away long since

The next day Letty received a little note containing only the following words in Marcy St Mayne's handwriting

"By the time you receive this my dear little sister elect I shall be en route for camp once more for I [illegible] I may safely leave Walter to your nursing Let me add that I have fought one battle for you shall I go and fight many more for my country M St M

And in the sunshine of her great happiness Letty Dallas never knew the everlasting eclipse that had come over Marcy St Mayne's life

Proclamation by the Governor

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, PORTLAND OREGON,
January 6 1863

By the President of the United States through Brigadier General George Wright commanding the Department of the Pacific and Brigadier General Benjamin Alvord commanding the District of Oregon I have been requested to raise six additional companies required to complete the 1st Regiment of Cavalry, Oregon Volunteers They will be needed the coming Spring on the frontiers of this State and Washington Territory and for an expedition against the Snake Indians who have so long been mercilessly engaged in robbing emigrants and murdering our fellow citizens I cannot doubt that the citizens of Oregon, who have always promptly responded to any demand for their military services will in like manner respond to this call, thereby showing their loyalty to the Government and aiding in chastising marauding bands of Indians which infest our frontiers

The enlisted men, when mounted will be supplied with horses by the United States it being understood that they will be mounted or not, as shall be deemed advisable by the Government.

Propositions to raise a whole company which will furnish their own horses and horse equipments, may be entertained The men are in such cases entitled to forty cents a day for the use and risk of their horses and horse equipments

Each company will consist of one hundred enlisted men, and when mustered into the service of the United States to serve for three years, unless sooner discharged

Recruiting offices will be immediately opened at Portland, Dalles City and perhaps at other places By the Governor,

ADDISON C, GIBBS
